Evaluating the Impact of Flexible Alcohol Trading Hours on Violence: An Interrupted Time Series Analysis

Author(s)
Humphreys DK, Eisner MP, Wiebe DJ
Published
2013
Publisher
PLOS One Type
Journal article

Abstract

BackgroundOn November 24th 2005, the Government of England and Wales removed regulatory restrictions on the times at which licensed premises could sell alcohol. This study tests availability theory by treating the implementation of Licensing Act (2003) as a natural experiment in alcohol policy. Conclusions This study found no evidence that a national policy increasing the physical availability of alcohol affected the overall volume of violence. There was, however, evidence suggesting that the policy may be associated with changes to patterns of violence in the early morning (3 a.m. to 6 a.m.).

Web Link

http://journals.plos.org/plosone/article?id=10.1371/journal.pone.0055581 View PDF