Abstract

The Tackling Violent Crime Programme (TVCP) was launched in November 2004. Through this programme the Home Office is working intensively with practitioners in a small number of local areas with high levels of more serious violent crime. The aim is to support local efforts to reduce alcohol-related crime and domestic violence in particular; to improve police and other agencies performance and partnership working; to improve local strategies; and to develop good practice, which can then be disseminated nationally.
